PRICE, FIVE CENTS

Davismen Fell Erdenheim Twice to Gain Commanding Lead in Post-Season Series

Victory for Narberth Tomorrow Will End Best Out of Five Series

MEET GLENSIDE NEXT

By JOHN MULLIGAN
Narberth's first week-end quest of added laurels to pack away with the Main Line League championship was a huge success, as Erdenheim fell twice in successive days by scores of 6-1 and 9-8.

Manager Gene Davis and his aides decided to hook up with the champion of the North Penn loop in a five-game series when Upper Darby's loss at the hands of Bryn Mawr made a play-off unnecessary in the local circuit, the first game to take place at Narberth and the second at Flourtown.

With two wins already in the sack, the Davismen now can end it by winning tomorrow, and put all their interest in a three-game series with Glenside, winner of the Montgomery County League championship. This one will get underway immediately following the final game with Erdenheim.

The home town tossers had things pretty much their own way in last Saturday's tussle with Frank Coleman keeping the visitors' hits scattered in all but the fourth inning, when Ed Cook's triple and Andy Lewis' bingle produced the lone marker credited to the boys from over Bethlehem Pike way. Frank set down five on strikes and allowed one free ticket.

Walt Gullett was no puzzle to the Boroughites, being tagged for 10 hits, fanning five and giving four passes to the initial bag. From the first inning, when Harry Francis started with a triple to left and scored on an error, his team was in no trouble, adding two in the third and fourth and one final pointer in the following session.

Walt MacGregor contributed the fielding masterpiece of the day in the fifth inning, a beautiful stop of a sizzling grounder off Bill Ott's bludgeon.

Gillfillan and Carroll poled doubles and Francis and King had triples for the winner, while Cook smacked a three-bagger for the invading forces.

But if the game preceding the Sabbath had been moderately dull, what took place at Erdenheim the day following was something absolutely different. Belting out four doubles and a single in the first inning to add four runs, as Pitcher Mohr was slapped off the hill, the champs saw a fighting team come back in the third with a trio of markers, then five more to go ahead in the fourth, and Narberth's chances for victory seemed to be worth less than a plugged nickel's worth.

Bill Reynolds, who went the full route and whiffed no less than 13 batsmen, found the going rough due to a short right field fence, and to bear down throughout in order to come out on top.

Bill Krastell went in to relieve Mohr and hurled a fairly good game, even though he was tagged merrily for 12 safeties. He didn't follow the usual style of pitchers, that of being a weak-sister at bat. He had two doubles to his credit and both came when it damaged the opponents.

Narberth went ahead for good and always in the sixth inning with the help of two alien errors. Buddie Walker, the first sacker, who wears a perpetual grin, sledged a hard single to left, which slipped past the fielder, and he continued down to the keystone. Barney Slaughter bounced one to short, but Dutchy Vandergrift in his anxiety to make a play at third on Walker, who had run across, tossed low to Harron and Bud loafed home with the important marker as the ball entered the crowd.

Both teams were guilty of very sloppy play at certain stages, neither looking like a club which had won a championship. Narberth's box score charges four errors, as compared with three for the home team, but the records fail to give evidence of the many sins of omission committed by both.

Walker was the big cap pistol for Narberth with five hits, two of them doubles, while Powell and MacGregor

History of Paralysis Described at Rotary

Dr. William P. Belk, Ardmore Pathologist, Traces Course From Early Times

EARLY STAGES ELUSIVE

Infantile paralysis as a mystery, and as a problem for the family doctor, formed the topic of a talk Tuesday before the Bala-Cynwyd-Narberth Rotary Club by Dr. William P. Belk, Ardmore pathologist. He was introduced by Dr. Romaine C. Hoffman, of Narberth.

A modern problem in its virulent form, infantile paralysis seems to have a long history, if examinations of Egyptian mummies are correct. A specimen of about 3700 B. C., Dr. Belk said, shows deformities which appear to have been caused by the disease, and subsequent archaeological records seem to bear that out.

It was 1774, however, before the disease was first written up by a doctor. In the 19th century other writers mentioned it, stating that it had its origin in India. The first outbreak in this country was in 1841 in New Orleans, the speaker said.

The modern tussles with the scourge, however, began in 1905 with an outbreak in Sweden and in 1907 in New York. The great epidemic of 1916 along the Atlantic seaboard resulted in 6000 deaths from 27,000 cases. The reason for this irregular occurrence in virulent form is a mystery.

Doctors, who do not agree on the details of the disease, are now sure, Dr. Belk said, that it is an infection, caused by a filterable virus so tiny that it defies the highest powered microscope. Illness comes in two stages, the first of which, with fever and other resemblances to cold or grippé, may pass off in a few days. Its recurrence, a short time afterward, is in the form of paralysis.

In the paralysis stage, which occurs in only 20 per cent. of the cases, the speaker said, any doctor can diagnose, but in the early stages it is an elusive ailment. For that reason physicians are leaning to the safe side in the present outbreak, with the feeling that many suspected cases may not be "polio." Dr. Belk praised the action of the Boards of Health in stopping the assembling of children.

"Experience has shown," he concluded, "that about 80 per cent. of all adults have had the disease in a mild form and are therefore immune. The efficacy of convalescent serum as a treatment has not been conclusively proven, yet if a child of mine contracted the disease, I would use serum, knowing that it would do no harm and might do good. With so much still to be learned about paralysis, we do not know whether cases which recover are due to medical science or an act of God."

DeMott Wins Cynwyd Club Championship, Beating Fischer

Ralph DeMott, of Narberth, won the singles tennis championship of the Cynwyd Club last Sunday by defeating Dr. Herbert Fischer, of Cynwyd, in a hard-fought five set match. The score was 6-0, 2-6, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

DeMott's phenomenal gets, brilliant lobbing, and Fischer's crisp volleys and driving featured the match. Usually a chop stroke player, DeMott surprised by employing drives, both forehand and backhand, with good results.

In the semi-finals Fischer eliminated Harold Lane, a high ranking player of the Philadelphia area, in three sets, while DeMott defeated Howard McMorris, erstwhile Penn star, in straight sets.

Noted Astronomer Dies in Narberth

Funeral Services for Monroe B. Snyder to be Held Today

WAS EDUCATOR 47 YRS.

Funeral services will be held today for Monroe B. Snyder, of 120 Woodside avenue, Narberth, widely known astrophysicist, who died at his home on Tuesday. Mr. Snyder, who was 84, had been ill for a few weeks.

A member of the faculty at Central High School, Philadelphia, for forty-seven years, Mr. Snyder retired in 1920. He became instructor in astronomy in 1873 and in 1880 was made professor of astronomy. From 1896 until the time of his retirement he was head of the department of mathematics and astronomy and since then was professor emeritus of mathematics and astronomy.

Mr. Snyder directed the Philadelphia Observatory, which became one of the foremost in the country, and a suggestion he made in an address before the National Conference of Electricians resulted in the establishment of a National Bureau of Standards by Congress.

He was the author of numerous articles, many of which were presented before the scientific societies. Private research also engaged his attention, particularly after his retirement from Central High School.

He was a fellow of the American Association of Science and Royal Astronomical Society of England, a member of the American Philosophical Society, American Astronomical Society, Astronomical Society of the Pacific, Astronomische Gesellschaft of Germany, American Mathematical Society, Franklin Institute and Academy of the Natural Sciences.

He is survived by two sons, John A. Snyder, of Narberth, professor of mathematics and astronomy at Central High School, and Alfred J. Snyder, of Chestnut Hill, attorney and professor of real property at Temple University Law School.

Miss Steinbach Engaged

Mrs. Raymond Steinbach, of Bentley road, Cynwyd, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jean Jardine Steinbach, and Mr. William Morrow Buchanan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Buchanan, of Alden, Pa.

"Big Brother" Movement to be Inaugurated in Borough at Meeting on Tuesday Night

Fred Walzer has asked us to write a piece for the paper regarding the effort which is being made in Narberth to put in effect what is called a "Big Brother" movement in behalf of the larger boys of the Borough, so that they will have something more to do, says Fred, than loaf around the corners and get themselves into all kinds of mischief and misdemeanors.

Properly directed, we think the plan can produce wholesome results and those who have a fling for getting along with virile lads ought to look in at the meeting which will occur at the Legion room next Tuesday evening, when the organization, we are told, will get underway.

It might also be a good idea for the sponsors to bring to their aid the excellent assistance of George W. Casey, for many years the executive secretary of the Big Brothers' Association in Philadelphia, as no man in America knows the boy subject better than the very same George, as, handsome and talented as he is, he has remained a bachelor still and true, so as to be able to devote his entire time towards keeping kids on the track as they cope with teeming temptations of life in a great big city and the impressive records demonstrate the splendid job he has made of it all. There's no palaver about Casey, no pollyanna preachments, but only a genuine, masculine affection for boys en bloc, the most important occupants of the footstool, in his estimation, and

Narberth Schools to Open on Monday

Board of Health Lifts Ban on Children at Special Meeting

BUS STOPS ARE LISTED

The Narberth Public Schools will open on Monday, October 3d, at 8.40 A. M.

Permission to open was granted by the Narberth Board of Health at a special meeting last Friday night. The Board's decision, however, is contingent on developments this week. To date no new cases of infantile paralysis have been reported in the Borough since September 16.

The Health Board also raised the ban on children attending moving picture theatres, and congregating in public places. The Sunday Schools of the Borough will not be permitted to reopen until Sunday, October 9, as Monday, the 3d, was designated as the date for lifting of quarantine regulations.

The Lower Merion Board of Health took similar action at a special meeting Wednesday afternoon, when it was decided to permit all schools in the Township to open Monday. The ban on attendance at moving picture theatres was also raised effective on that date and Sunday Schools permitted to open October 9.

In commenting on the matter, Dr. George A. Sloan, president of the Board of Health, stated that while he felt the worst was over, a few more cases of poliomyelitis might crop up which would arise whether or not the schools were opened.

The opening of the Narberth Schools, originally scheduled for September 7, was postponed by order of the Board of Health on September 1, due to the outbreak of several cases of infantile paralysis in the Borough. Similar action was taken by the Lower Merion Board of Health and by the City of Philadelphia.

The faculty of the Borough schools will meet this Friday to discuss plans for the coming term and to prepare for the work on Monday. According to Supervising Principal W. James Drennen all plans will be made and everything arranged for immediate and earnest work. There will be a full day session for grades two to eight, inclusive, he stated. The kindergarten sessions will meet in the morning and afternoon. Parents of kindergarten children will receive notices concerning the attendance of pupils in morning and afternoon sessions.

The School cafeteria will open on Monday and be open every day thereafter.

Appoint New Teacher for Narberth Public School

Miss Agnes Taylor was appointed teacher of home economics, girls' hygiene and school nurse at a recent meeting of the Narberth School Board. She will fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Anna May Moore, who was married during the summer.

Miss Taylor, whose home is in Scranton, Pa., is a graduate of Penn State with three years' experience as cafeteria manager of Central High School, Scranton, and three years in the Scranton Country Day School.

Other new teachers at the Narberth School this year are Miss Jeanette Dell, a U. of P. graduate, who will head the English Department; Miss Lois Wunderlich, a graduate of West Chester State Teachers' College, who will teach the fourth grade, and I. B. Knoll, a Millersville State Teachers' College graduate with teaching experience at Lebanon Junior High School and the Continuation School, Reading, who will have charge of general shop.

Wills All to Wife

A fourteen word will reading, "All I possess I leave to my wife, Mary Gillis, without any reserve," disposed of the estate of the late William H. Gillis, of Union avenue, Bala. It was filed for probate at Norristown last week. Mr. Gillis, who died August 7 at Ocean City, Maryland, was manager of the Cynwyd office (since discontinued) of the Philadelphia Electric Company. He had been an employee of that company and a resident of Bala-Cynwyd for over forty years.

Welcome News

That students should be anxious to get back to school seems contrary to the nature of things but such is more or less the case on the Main Line as well as in Philadelphia.

The enforced vacation of over three weeks will be brought to a close on Monday when the public schools of Lower Merion and Narberth open. The Boards of Health of both Township and Borough have come to the conclusion that it is now safe to open the schools with the decided recession in the number of cases of infantile paralysis reported recently.

Parents who a few weeks ago were declaring that whether or not the schools opened on schedule their children would not attend and now joined by parents who call the school authorities wanting to know if they are not going to open soon.

Any fears of parents should be allayed by the statement of Dr. Nicholson, president of the Main Line Branch of the Montgomery County Medical Society, who quoted one of the foremost authorities on poliomyelitis to the effect that there was no reason why schools should not be opened. Medical research, Dr. Nicholson pointed out, has shown that to produce infection contacts must be direct, prolonged and intimate, and that the organism remains in an infected person only thirty six hours.

At the same time the suggestion made by Dr. Sloan, head of the Narberth Board of Health and acted upon by the Lower Merion Board, that all children who have any illness whatsoever be excluded from school, is a wise one. There is no use taking any chances.

A few more cases of the disease may crop up on the Main Line but it does not follow that the opening of schools will be responsible. Cold weather is near at hand and it has been established that the disease is definitely doomed when Jack Frost hovers about.

It is hard to say which group has been hit hardest by the enforced vacation. School authorities are champing at the bit, eager to get about the year's work, students are fed up with loafing and have had little opportunity to amuse themselves except in solitary pursuits, mothers will doubtless be glad to get the youngsters off their hands for a bit, and business men and particularly movie house proprietors may well sound paeans of joy for the raising of the ban means increased purchasing and movie attendance.

All in all it should be very popular, this opening of school.

Shreds & Patches

Hancock

Right in what seems to be the center of Hancock, N. H., is a small lake whose unusual clarity reflected back almost without distortion the fringing trees and hills on the radiant morning when The Vagrant's wanderings had brought him to the grove of noble pines which clothes its northern shore. In that spot of unusual charm adjacent to the village street, the town authorities, or some other thoughtful persons, have erected substantial benches which hospitably beckon any wayfarer to enter the grove and rest a while, an invitation which The Vagrant was quick to sense and to accept. The sky and the air had both been washed by a recent thunderstorm, and were hanging out to dry that July morning. The little lake and its shores seemed to be the abode only of the red-winged blackbirds occasionally flying across the narrow waters, and of the sandpipers which, with their usual nicety, tip-toed along the exact margin where the little ripples fingered the pebbly shores. Sitting there facing the lake, The Vagrant was inclined to envy those permanent people of Hancock who possessed their attractive village as a place of abode and for practical convenience and who, also, merely by coming to that bench, could blot out the town and enjoy the solitude and refreshment of such a pure bit of nature. Then, suddenly, the voice of a deep-throated bell, tolling so nearby that the pines quivered with all the delightful over-tones and harmonies, reminded The Vagrant that just a glance beyond his right shoulder was the white Congregational meeting house and that the day was Sunday.

Fishing

As the bell tolled, automobiles drove into the long horse-slides at the rear of the meeting house and their passengers, metamorphosed that moment from automobilists to Congregationalists, slowly entered the wide, columned porch of the edifice and through the two small doors into the auditorium itself whence, when the bell had struck its final and emphatic three, sharp strokes, came their voices congregationally singing the Doxology. Whatever religious meditations this situation might have inspired in The Vagrant were forestalled by the arrival of three small boys who strode down to the water's edge with such definite purpose that The Vagrant's attention was centered on them immediately. One was completely equipped for fishing with pole, bait and even a big creel dangling on his back. He immediately baited his hook and cast it into the water at the exact spot where he had happened to stop. The other boys chattered by themselves, but the intent fisherman was no conversationalist. Fishing engrossed him. He was one of those in whom is born the instinct which makes fishing a state of mind, a form of being, rather than a mere sport or useful occupation. The other boys, the spectator Vagrant and the white meeting house with its songs had all dropped below the horizon of his consciousness. He fished. When he caught one he took it off the hook silently, dropped it into his creel quickly, rebaited and cast in this line again.

Narrator

One of the other boys soon became engrossed in a boat which was tethered there, but the third gave his undivided attention to the fisherman. Obviously he had no desire to fish, but the operation fascinated him, and he was aware that The Vagrant up in the grove also was an interested spectator. Soon that boy disclosed himself, for as each fish was pulled in, he turned and shouted its name to The Vagrant. "Perch!" — a pause — "Shiner!" — more watchful waiting — "Sunfish!" — "A bigger shiner!" — "A good perch!" — "Sunfish, again!" (apparently sunfish had little significance) and so on with unflagging interest and enthusiasm, narrating to the world with a touch of personal zest the accomplishments of the busy one. He revealed himself there to be instinctively a member of the tribe of narrators and chroniclers, who, ever since human speech was evolved, have taken it on themselves to go about among the habitations of men, telling of what is being done and said and thought. From that instinctive and irrepressible trait, which is always deep-seated in the disposition of some human beings, have sprung all poets, novelists, historians, the writers of songs and ballads, some singers, some actors and also the lowly, but essential, newspaper reporters. Probably, the same trait, in distorted form, is responsible too for some of the gossips and scandal mongers.

working knowledge of boy nature, aims to restore the transgressor to the straight and narrow, without making too much of a fuss about it, nor preaching too grandly along goody-goody lines. Marvelous things have been done in this realm and if you ask any Philadelphia judge what he thinks of the work of the Big Brothers, make ready to listen to an encomium which will soar to the skies. There may be a little of that kind of business to be done in Narberth and the man who is equipped for the fray ought to be willing to lend himself to it, for the compensation is fine, indeed, because—

A boy is getting ready To be a man—
And a man is after
The way of God.

Our own boy effort in Narberth, about 7 years ago, might warrant quick sketching for the encouragement it may afford. About two dozen boys used to come around this corner (that's why it was said we wanted the Playground) and all of them averaged better than garden variety. It was the time of their lives when the blood started to stir in another direction, and as our own progeny was in the group, we were naturally alert for signs which would indicate that new developments had come on the boy horizon. We saw them come, all right, all right, and as we lined up our own lad to give him more ballast for the harder journey, the thought occurred that results might be surer if the whole gang got the works. Of course, this needed the acquiescence of the various parents and, believe us, this was freshly and eagerly accorded.

The Sixth Commandment (King James VII) was the keynote, and monthly meetings were held. It was easy enough to be completely frank with the boys, because it was soon evident that they had arrived in their own ways, and, inevitably, on all about how this life begins, and neither was it difficult, when you confronted the ingenuous (and fine boys are always that) to put the stuff on the garbage basis where it belonged and to keep it there. As the thing progressed, fathers of strange boys asked for the admittance of their sons and the net achievements were altogether to the good.

We have kept tabs on the whole score and more of the lads as the years went on and we are here to say that we do not know of any one of them who has landed in a jam of any kind nor one whose respect and solicitude for the other fellow's sister was anything except what their mothers would like it to be.

If you think a boy is a pretty important integral of the general scheme of things, and if you have a fair ability in making dreams come true, then by all means go to the meeting at the Legion next Tuesday night, for it is sure to be a very interesting and fruitful occasion.

THE SPECTATOR.

people often consider him to be a light-minded chatterbox, an irresponsible one, who should not be told any secrets. He goes about interpreting other people and usually lacks an interpreter himself. It is clear to him that the thing which he has seen or heard should be made known; he perceives the human appetite for news, and the public value of disseminating it, and he follows that instinct often innocently, unaware that there may be those who, for purposes of their own, prefer silence and secrecy. The solid boy who avariciously filled his creel with fish, possibly saw no need of making it known to all and sundry that fish abounded in that spot. Or he may have enjoyed the personal publicity, who knows? Anyway, The Vagrant's heart went out to that sunny faced boy who, lacking fish and fishing skill, generously, honestly and enthusiastically shouted out that pined-for bank the results of his observations. Life has many especially prepared rebuffs and wounds in store for him, growing out of the common belief that reporters lack sensibilities, but, also, he will enjoy satisfactions unknown to practical men. And may he bon Dieu, who knows how wondrous are his own creations, how worthy of good reporting, watch over him and endow him with eyes that see straight and a tongue that tells true, so that in the end he shall be qualified to a seat in that most heavenly part of heaven where the chroniclers and the writers congregate world without end.

BUSINESS BITS

Narberth has been made Main Line headquarters of the AutoFyrstop Co.
of Philadelphia, a subsidiary of Merchant and Evans. Mr. Edward H.
Mohr is district manager, at 258 Haverford avenue, second floor of the Narberth Coal Company's building.
Recommended by fire fighting authorities, including Narberth's Fire Chief, Charles V. Noel, Autofyrstop is a combination of automatic alarm and automatic extinguisher. Its fluid is carbon tetrachloride, hermetically sealed in an attractive glass flask, as illustrated in an advertisement in this issue.

Value of the device to Main Line residents is shown by these N. F. P.
A. fire facts for a recent year. The year's loss of life by fire was 10,000, of which 31 per cent. of deaths and 13 per cent. of injuries were to children under ten years of age; 65 per cent. of the deaths by fire and 40 per cent. of the injuries occurred in dwellings; 60 per cent. of the number of fires took place in homes.

Novel and interesting window displays have attracted considerable attention at the Narberth Coal Company, Haverford and Narberth avenues. This week's were about the opening of school, and the process of mining coal.

Four Interesting Films Appearing at Egyptian

About "Lady and Gent," in which George Bancroft and Wynne Gibson star at the Egyptian Theatre this Friday and Saturday nights, one critic says it is "The kind of picture that will make everyone who sees it feel he has seen a really worth-while piece of entertainment."

"Red Headed Woman," at Cynwyd next Monday and Tuesday, has beautiful Jean Harlow in a role that has been termed "unnatural and in a measure revolting." The photoplay is based on the Saturday Evening Post tale of a super-gold-digger. Chester Morris is in the good supporting cast.

Next Wednesday and Thursday the Egyptian's feature will be "Bring 'Em Back Alive," Frank Buck's exciting film of wild animal captures—very much worth seeing.

Jack Oakie, W. C. Fields and Lyda Roberti head a large group of comedians in "Million Dollar Legs," at Cynwyn next week-end; crazy and funny.

Beveridge Biography Shows Man's Versatility

In these days of a Presidential campaign, when disillusionment is forcing its inexorable logic on many citizens who, when more happily situated, were accustomed quite blithely to vote for the party of their fathers and think no more about it, the Community Library is fortunately able to provide an unusually complete collection on biographical and historical works of a kind which will assist the perplexed citizen, as well as entertain and instruct those who may possibly have more time for serious reading now than formerly.

The latest addition to that group of books, just off the press, in fact, is "Beveridge and the Progressive Era," by Claude G. Bowers, whose "Tragic Era" is familiar to many Library patrons. Senator Beveridge was a many-sided man, and so energetic in his personal espousal of those causes and objects which won his adherence that any adequate account of his life must necessarily be a pretty complete picture of that last period of liberalism in American national politics, that period which was brought to a focus by Roosevelt, somewhat dimmed by Taft, and was being advanced by Wilson to a point of exceeding promise when the Great War interrupted it and produced an opposite trend in affairs and opinions which is still prevalent.

The outstanding characteristics of Beveridge were his oratorical brilliance, his passionate devotion to the causes which he took up and his enormous capacity for work. After a long and distinguished career in state and national politics, in which he appeared to have won for himself a permanent place in the annals of the United States Senate, at least, he turned his attention to literature (as a novice and rather late in life to begin) and produced his monumental "Life of John Marshall," which is regarded by both historians and by literary critics as being one of the great biographies of the English language. He was working on a biography of Lincoln, and had completed two volumes of it, when sudden death overtook him in the full stride of his magnificent powers.

That briefly and inadequately indicates the basis of Bowers' biography of Beveridge. If such subjects, conscientiously and competently handled, appeal to local readers, as the circulation records of the Library certainly indicate that they do, there will be many who will wish immediately to make a reservation at the Library for this new book. There is a good deal besides politics in Mr. Bowers' book. The accounts of Beveridge's travels, his wide friendships, and his personal traits and habits are well done. The book also contains sketches of Aldrich, La Follette, Dilliver, Cummins and Bristow, which are models of literary portraiture.

To those readers who may wish to pursue the subject of Beveridge and his works, after finishing the Bowers' biography, the Library is able to provide his four-volume life of Chief Justice Marshall.

Helen Taft Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr College, has announced the postponement of the opening of the institution from October 4 to October 10 as a precautionary measure

What is the finest automatic heat in the world?

NOT oil—with its soot, its smell, its inky-black smoke settling like a blight over the whole neighborhood. Not to mention the added danger from its explosive tendencies.

NOT gas—few pocketbooks can stand the gaff of gas-fired furnaces for home heating.

The Finest Automatic Heat in the World is COAL!

Automatic is what we said and automatic is what we mean. A Newton installation is as fully automatic as any gas or oil burner—and infinitely more economical.

A modern automatic coal heating plant puts an end to all trips to the cellar to adjust the fire, put on coal or remove the ashes from the furnace. In fact you can lock up the cellar—give the key to Newton if you so desire—and not go down your cellar for a year!

Call Newton today—ask for the Engineering Dept.—and we will give or mail you the whole story!

NEWTON COAL

Cynwyd and Ardmore Firemen to Play for Title

The final game of the championship series between the Union Fire Association of Bala-Cynwyd and the Merion Fire Company, of Ardmore, at the Cynwyd School field this Saturday will be in the nature of a benefit affair for two players of the teams who were injured in the first game of the series on September 17. They are Otto Webb, of the Ardmore Fire Company nine, who pulled a ligament in his foot, and Ernest Zengrel, of the Cynwyd team, who suffered a torn ligament in his knee.

A cup presented by Walter C. Neely, president of the Union Fire Association, and chairman of the Board of Directors of the Lower Merion Township Fire Department, will be presented to the winning team. Ardmore won the first game of the series 3-2, and Cynwyd evened the count by taking the second game, 8-7.

Tickets for tomorrow's fray will be on sale by members of both teams and donations may be made at the field.

Plan Hoover Rally

All Republicans, both men and women, are invited to attend the Hoover Rally on Saturday evening, October 8, at the Garrick Theatre in Norristown, at 8.15. Hoover days will also be celebrated at this time in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Unusual Flower Blooms in Penn Wynne Home

Last Friday evening, a night blooming cereus, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ainsworth Smith, of Penn Wynne, bloomed for the third time this season. The flower, wax white, with a beautiful center, was about nine inches in diameter. The back fingers of the petals were of a delicate shade of pink, and with an unusually fine odor. The flower as soon as dusk comes open very slowly, taking about two hours to do so, and remains open until after midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have owned the plant, which is of the cactus variety, for five years. It did not bloom last year, but did so two years ago.

Advertisers in this paper are reliable merchants. Deal with them.

Mr. and Mrs. William Warr, formerly of Narberth, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lafore, of "Penn Valley Farms," Penn Valley. Miss Helen Salmon, of Ashland, Ky., is the guest of Miss Helen Lafore.

"Flour Barrel Days"

Are By Gones

It's been some time ago since you heard of families storing in their flour, sugar, apples, potatoes, etc., for the winter months. Possibly the reason for this is the era of the automobile, good roads or the convenience of local stores—maybe a change in the mode of living.

Whatever the cause might be, "flour barrel days" are over.

But the purchase of your winter's supply of fuel in early autumn still remains logical and modern, as well as an investment in winter comfort.

Demand always booms prices and winter's demand is fuel. Place your order today for your supply of the finest of white ash LEHIGH COALS, a supply of that famous KOPPERS COKE, or a tank full of ATLANTIC FUEL OIL.

These three fuels are by far the most outstanding fuels in performance at no extra cost. Such popularity must be deserved. We are ideally located to serve you with the fuel you desire.
